This is our church: Presbyterian Polity and the Annual Congregational Meeting

One of the gifts of being Presbyterian is that we believe deeply—both theologically and practically—that the church belongs to the people of God. Not to a pastor. Not to a small group behind the scenes. Not to a denomination far away. This is your church.

That conviction is rooted in one of the core ideas of the Reformed tradition: the priesthood of all believers. Drawing on passages like 1 Peter 2:9: “You are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, God’s own people,” Presbyterians affirm that every baptized member is called to participate in Christ’s ministry and in the life and governance of the church. Each of us is gifted by the Holy Spirit, each of us is entrusted with responsibility, and each of us has a voice in the life of the church.

How Presbyterians are led

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) is not governed by bishops, or by congregational vote alone. Presbyterian governance, what we call polity, is built on shared leadership and communal discernment.

At First Presbyterian Church of Hastings, the spiritual and practical leadership of the congregation is entrusted to the Session, which is made up of 13 ruling elders. Ruling elders are elected from the congregation and ordained to serve as spiritual leaders: listening for God’s guidance, caring for the life of the church, and helping the congregation live faithfully into its calling. The term “ruling elder” is not about “ruling” over the church, but rather think of a ruler used to measure things. Our ruling elders are measuring, encouraging, and leading our church together.

As your pastor, I serve as the teaching elder on Session. While pastors have a particular role that includes preaching, teaching, administering the sacraments, and offering pastoral leadership, we are clear in our polity that all elders share equal responsibility and authority in governing the church. No one elder speaks alone; we discern and lead together. The Book of Order puts it this way: “Ruling elders and teaching elders are called to serve together in councils of the church” (F-3.02).

Discerning the Holy Spirit together

At every level of the church, our calling is not simply to make decisions efficiently, but to discern the will of the Holy Spirit. Scripture reminds us that “There are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit... To each is given the manifestation of the Spirit for the common good” (1 Corinthians 12:4, 7).

That belief is why Presbyterians pray before meetings, listen carefully to one another, and value participation. Discernment is rarely quick or easy, but we trust that God speaks through the gathered community.

Why the Annual Congregational Meeting Matters

The Annual Congregational Meeting is one of the most visible and important expressions of this shared leadership. At this meeting, the congregation:

- Receives the annual budget, a practical and theological document that reflects our shared priorities and mission
- Votes on the terms of call for the pastors, affirming the covenant between pastors and congregation
- Elects officers, elders, deacons, and trustees, entrusting fellow members with leadership in the coming years
- Reflects on the annual report, to think about how we have “been the church” over the last year and how we plan to “be the church” in the year to come.

These actions are not mere formalities. They are acts of faith and trust, moments when the congregation claims its responsibility for the present and future of the church. As the Book of Order reminds us, “The people of God are called to participate in God’s mission in the world” (F-1.01), and that participation includes prayerful decision-making about leadership and resources.

A shared calling

Presbyterian polity assumes something hopeful and demanding: that God’s Spirit is at work not just in individuals, but in the whole body. When we gather for a congregational meeting, we do so not as consumers or spectators, but as members of Christ’s body, seeking together to be faithful stewards of the church we love.

So when you attend the Annual Congregational Meeting on Sunday, January 25 at 10:30am, remember:

This is your church.

Your voice matters.

Your presence matters.

And together, with humility, prayer, and hope, we trust that God will continue to guide us into the future God is preparing.

Your servant in Christ,

Teaching Elder (Pastor) Greg

January 2026 Communion Offering

The primary purpose of Royal Family KIDS Camp is to give foster children ages 7-11 a week of positive memories and royal treatment in a Christian camp environment. Adult Camp Counselors give attention and encouragement to his/her "Big Camper" during their time at camp. In addition, each Camper is exposed to a variety of fun activities, designed for their success and to build self-esteem. For most of these children, it's the best week of the year—a special time when they can focus on having fun and enjoy being a kid.

Camp Directors, Staff and Counselors go through intensive training. This includes a study of the dynamics of child abuse and neglect, facilitated by recognized professionals in these fields. There is also an intensive screening process for Counselors and Staff. Two Children—and only two—are assigned to each Camp Counselor. In addition, there is generally a "back-up" Staff person for each Counselor, so the actual Staff-to-Camper ratio is often one to one.
